The ConcertLand dance given by the Stake Board of the M. I. A. was one of the most delightful events of the Season. Professor and Mrs Greve who have recently come to Lethbridge from Seattle furnished most of the programme. They are both Artists of exceptional ability and long experience. Professor Fred Greve was born in Germany and graduated from its famous Conservatory under the Master Professor Gobey Eberhardt and has a wide reputation as a great Pianist in the United States. Mrs Greve is an English lady and stands in the first rank of professional Violinists. Her remarkable technique and wonderfully expressive playing are really great. She also plays with skill on the Mandolin, Japanese fiddle and Piccolo, all the numbers were on the theologically encored. Mrs Brewerton and Miss Fisher also furnished beautiful Vocal selections. Mrs Brewerton has a lovely voice showing good training. Miss Fisher's rich Contralto gives promise of great things with further cultivation. The music lovers of Raymond will likely hear Professor and Mrs Greve again in the near future and will undoubtedly give them a warm reception.

Facts About Canada's Centennial Exposition

To Be Held in Winnipeg in 1912

THE REASONS WHY
A leaflet, giving seventeen reasons for holding Canada's International Exposition and Selkirk Centennial in Winnipeg in 1912, was issued by the Exposition Committee this week for distribution at the Toronto Exhibition. Set forth under a cover which bears the inscription "Why Canada should hold a great International Exposition in 1912," the reasons adduced are these:

SUPPOSED BY PEOPLE GENERALLY

"The date selected for Canada's first International Exposition is the centenary celebration of the first white settlement in Western Canada by Lord Selkirk in 1812.

"Canada has never had an exhibition of the splendid, rich resources of the Dominion, big enough and broad enough to fit the greatness of the country.

"An International Exposition is undoubtedly the best means of advertising to the world the advantages open in Canada for investment of capital and for settlers.

"The holding of an exposition will show what Canada has done and is capable of doing, thus adding new strength and energy to every Canadian.

"A definite invitation of a definite date, inviting the world to come and see for themselves what Canada can do, will produce results which will more than repay the outlay.

"Such an imposition will supply a concrete object upon which all Canadians can unite in making a worthy display of the wealth and worth of Canada.

"National Expositions tend to elevate and instruct all classes of the community, thus creating a new feeling of national pride and interest among our own people.

"An exposition will bring to gether (all that Canada has to show where it will be put into a space where it will be presented in the best possible way to the millions of people who will visit the Exposition.

"Canada needs capital, population and live men and women, and an international exposition provides an excuse to come and see us.

"The west is the greatest market the manufacturers of the other provinces have, and by its development it will advance the trade and commerce of all Canada.

"The proposal to hold an International Exposition at Winnipeg in 1909, having been placed before the people and the press of Canada has received the endorsement of general meetings, boards of trade and of editors throughout the Dominion.

"It will create and open up many outside markets for a great variety of our products and manufactures in countries which at present know nothing of our capabilities.

"The most desirable of those people who are now leaving, a new purpose for life, wish to investigate before, and an exposition will afford each people full and accurate information at minimum cost of money and time.

"Those who visit Canada to see a great exposition will see at first hand the opportunities offered by the several provinces through which they will travel to reach the Exposition at Winnipeg.

"Canada is in its commercial stage of development, and nothing can do more to carry forward this stage to a successful issue than a great international exposition.

Friday, Oct. 15, 1909

When we learn that the Seattle Exposition has resulted in some substantial publicity for the Canadian West, we may not be blamed for feeling that our own proposed 1912 Centennial would do an immense amount of good for all the provinces, and in fact for the whole Dominion.

Hugh McKellar, Moose Jaw,
in a communication to The Commercial this week gives an interesting account of how the Seattle Exposition has been a great advertiser for the Soo Line and Moose Jaw districts. Thousands of tourists have passed on their way to Seattle, or have taken the Canadian trip on their return from the Exposition.
Moose Jaw district, and the Soo Line, with fields of ripening grain or in stock, or farmers busy threshing in the fields, far as the eye can see on each side of the railway, impressed such visitors with the possibilities of Saskatchewan as a home for successful farm operators.

The result is that many parties are now visiting those districts for the purposes of purchasing farm lands. Three different parties from Illinois were in the Moose Jaw district during the last 15 days, and one of them purchased 5,000 acres, another 8,000 acres and the third endeavored to secure 10,000 acres.
The last deal will have to be completed by correspondence.
All this land is on the Outlook branch, in the vicinity of the Elbow, the purchased acres being close to Loreburn. The price was practically $20.00 per acre.

Think of all the tourists that would be attracted here by the Big Centennial! Thousands would come not merely to attend the "Fair," but to look into the opportunities for investment here. In other words, the Centennial would not be so much a coaxer as a convenient time in which those could come who have their intentions anyway bent on a trip to these parts.

There is no way of improving a place so much as by encouraging good merchants, good schools and good people to settle among you, and this cannot be done unless you spend your money at home.

Too poor to take a home paper?
Well that is a disreputable condition,

He had to wait some time before the door flew open, and a stout, good-looking woman dressed with much smart hurry, rustled in; and in this frolic, self-satisfied woman he caught a sharp glance at his brother. He was recognizing his sister Adela's Mendora," she said, with outstretched hands.

"Is that person peered at his brother's check so nervously."

"Well, Robert!" she said. "So you're really come back like the proverbial bad penny, I suppose. Why didn't you let us know? I ate people popping in on one like this—not but w'at you're quite welcome, of course. When did you come back? And what have you

"It's not as easy to make money out there as people will tell you, Adela, but, considering everything, it's very nothing much to complain of. Of course, one has to work hard—and this is a bad time in Canada."

"So that's what has brought you home, I suppose?" said Mrs. Henderson, with a fretful intonation in her voice. "And where are you going now, Robert?"

"I thought, Adela, if you could put me up for a little time," he said, tentatively, "till I looked round a bit, and then—"

"Mrs. Henderson said, 'I'll do my best for you, but I can't do more than that.'"

"Well, I don't know whether Frank might be able to do anything for you," said his sister, suddenly, with rather a doubtful air; "only times are bad with him too, and, of course, you'll understand, Robert, that I hate to see any of my own people—well—sponging on Frank. But you can stay for a few days anyway. Have you brought any luggage with you?"

And with a laugh Mrs. Henderson rustled out of the room. Robert Montagu with an odd expression on his face followed her meekly to a small, cold room at the top of the house, furnished like a servant's bedroom, and looking out into a yard.

Oh! Obiously, you must appear. Not only if we're a bit crowded at dinner, you won't mind dining at a side table, will you? I shall have to put one of the girls there anyway, and, as a matter of fact, you'll come in quite useful, as I was just about to send the third girl home. And I didn't want to ask the governess to join us. Those sort of people presume so much on one's kindness sometimes; and Miss Verney considers herself pretty — and well born — though I can't see it."

And Mrs. Henderson rustled out of the little room, leaving Robert Montagu to ponder over the offer of new quarters, which he was to consider so luxurious after—Canada! He would just wait his time. The children might make up to him for their mother's deficiencies.

Perhaps she was not the only unhappy person in that house, for, from what she had heard one of the girls said about their newly-arrived uncle, it was very likely that he was by no means a welcome guest. "Imagine his coming now of all times," Amy had said, in her high, fretful voice, "bringing disgrace on us all, and making Arthur think that queer relations we have! He must be kept in the background as much as possible."

The girl got up with a little shudder of dislike as her eyes fell on the tall, good-looking young man who had stolen in upon her. She cordially disliked her employer's nephew, who had chosen on more than one occasion to pester her with his unwelcome and insolent attentions, but young Henderson was quite impervious to snubs.

"I have my work to do," she said, quietly; "and in any case I should be too tired to dance."

The young man laughed as his eyes rested with bold admiration on the girl's flushed face.

"I'll stand aside," he said.

"No! By Jove! I'll not go till I've taken what I want!" he said, with a laugh.

"You'll keep your distance, you young cur," said a quiet voice, and a strong hand flung him aside with astounding ease, while Margaret Verney drew a long breath of relief.

"He didn't hurt you?" asked

"And you'd better clear out," said Montagu, wheeling round and facing the infuriated young man, "unless you wish to be—horsewhipped. Get out!"

"And leave the field clear for you, eh? Well, I wish Miss Verney joy of the returned prodigal—the beggar man from Canada," muttered Henderson, maliciously; but he went out of the room all the same.

"Oh, no; I have other things to do."

"And you're happy?"

"Well—as a rule, yes. Of course, one has dreams—"

"Yes. We all have dreams," he said; "some of us realize them—some don't. What are your dreams Miss Verney?"

"To get back my old home. It is in the market now; we were obliged to sell the place when my father died, leaving me and my sister almost penniless. That is why I am here, and I long so far for the day when I can go back."

"Miss Verney" said Mrs. Henderson with an air of great languor. "Oh, she is leaving this afternoon. She has become quite importunate. She was positively insolent to Ralph, I hear, also to myself."

"Oh! really? And what are our plans?"

"That," said Montagu, very deliberately, "I prefer not to tell you just at present."

"He'll never do anything worth speaking of," said Mrs. Henderson, when later in the day she had seen her brother depart—to travel to town by the same train that was bearing Miss Verney away to a fresh servitude. "A rolling

"I may come and see you?" he asked. She colored a little.

"Yes—if you wish," she said, with a momentary hesitation. And then he went away to his solicitor's offices, where he was received with all the respect and deference due to a millionaire.

"I particularly wish you to make inquiries for me about an estate in Yorkshire at present in the market, called Hallenby Hall," he said, concisely. "It is situated near the sea coast, and is a property I wish to acquire."

"And can you care just a little?" he said, eagerly.

"Oh, I care so much," she whispered. The rest was silence. They were married very quietly a few weeks after. And later in the day the newly-married couple set off on their journey to Yorkshire. "We will visit the vicinity of your old home," Montagu said to his wife, and it was with a strangely-fluttering heart that in the warm, summer evening the girl found herself alighting at the familiar little station. A handsome motor with a couple

"But I don't understand," she said, faintly. "I—thought you were a poor man, and—"

"Well, my sister and her family made the same mistake," said Montagu, quietly. "You see, they took it all for granted—and so did you. I had my own reasons for not wishing to undeceive them for the present, and—here we are at home, Margaret."

And that was how Margaret Montagu came back to her old home. As Mrs. Montagu was standing Mrs. Henderson opened the paper and ran her eye down the columns of fashionable intelligence, a form of literature her soul dearly loved. She was remarkably conversant with the peerage—by name—and loved nothing better than to display her knowledge of such matters.

"Listen," she said, in a voice that shook; "just listen, Amy! the deceitfulness of some people, it's too much:—

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Montagu have arrived at Claridge's Hotel for the season. It will be remembered that Mr. Robert Montagu recently returned from Canada, having made an immense fortune, and shortly after his return married Miss Margaret Verney, second

He could have had to his best friends," wailed Mrs. Henderson, while tears actually stood in her eyes.

Amey seized the paper.

"It can't be your brother!" she cried. "Why he was penniless—at least, you said so, mother."

"I know—I know," wailed Mrs. Henderson, miserably. "He had never done any good at home, and he led me to suppose—"

Mrs. Henderson simply wept. There was something to weep for. She had made a ghastly mistake.

ral Sunday-school)—"Now children, can any of you tell what is meant by the visitation of the Bishop?" Little Girl (after a long pause)—"Please, sir, an affliction sent from heaven."

When you hear one man trying to belittle another, it's a safe bet that the other is his superior.

TOMATOES.

Stuffed Tomatoes.—Take twelve large smooth tomatoes, one teaspoonful salt, little pepper, one tablespoonful butter, one tablespoonful of sugar, one cupful of bread crumbs, one teaspoonful of onion juice, cut a thin slice from the smooth end of each, with a small spoon scoop out as much of the pulp and juice as possible without injuring their shape. Fruit Cup.—This is a good dish when cantaloupes are high priced. Fill sherbet glasses with cantaloupe scooped out with a teaspoon. Sprinkle this with chopped mint

SEASONABLE DISHES.

Corn Pudding.—Six ears fresh corn cut from the cob or one can of sweet corn, three eggs beaten light, three tablespoonfuls of melted butter, but not oiled, one-half cupful of milk, two tablespoonfuls of flour. Butter a baking dish plentifully, pour in the mixture, and bake in a hot oven three-quarters of an hour. No baking pow-

Creamed Red Radishes.—Take four bunches of small red radishes, put in cold water over night, partly peel, cut in round slices not too thin, let stand in salt water for two hours, put on to boil in cold water with two slices of bacon, and one teaspoonful of salt, boil thirty-five minutes, drain, melt a large tablespoonful of butter in a saucepan, three tablespoonfuls of flour, a half teaspoonful of salt, a dash of pepper. Stir until smooth, with a cup and a half of milk or cream.

CANNING AND PRESERVING.

ripe tomatoes chopped fine, one teacupful of salt, one teacupful of black mustard seed, one teacupful

CLEANING.

Carpet Cleaner.—To one bar of white soap cut fine in a gallon of water, let it boil until well dissolved.

Gasoline Cleaner.—Put gasoline in a bread raiser that has a cover into a tub of hot water to heat; put goods in you want to clean, close it up, and leave it for at least half an hour, when you are ready to work the goods in the same way as you would with cold gasoline, but it is surer to clean better. Do this work out of doors and there will be no explosion.

Tommy—"And what does he call himself afterwards?" Father—"I wouldn't like to tell you, my son."

Indians seem to be causing the authorities of town a little trouble this week, owing to their taste for character west of town after using the Indians and took him to Leth-to be getting a hold on quite a lot of whisky, and the authorities seem to be having a time determining from what source they get it.
